Advocacy Program Brand

More than just a name.

This customer advocacy program is recognized by its customers and beyond for its compelling brand identity and seen as a gold standard in advocacy program branding.

There are a lot of advocacy programs out there; what makes yours stand out? There's so much more to naming a program than picking a word from a list. An exceptional advocacy brand is built on a deep understanding of the target audience, a clearly defined value proposition, foundational program values that guide day-to-day execution and an intentional program personality.

In your own words, why does brand play an important role in a successful advocacy program?

What is the name of your advocacy program? Why did you choose this name and how does it reflect your members and the priorities of the program?

What is your program's purpose, vision, mission and values? How did you define these elements of your program brand? Describe your process.

What is the value proposition of your program to members? How is this value proposition manifested on a day-to-day basis?

How have you created an intentional program personality? Share if/how you use archetype, voice, and visuals.

How has your program brand gained recognition beyond your own organization and client base? What has been the impact for you, your company, and your customers?

Please provide examples of program brand in action. For example, program experiences, messaging, and visual identity.

Advocate Engagement Campaign

Where creativity meets results.

Advocacy campaigns are launched every day but only a few leave an impression on both the organization and the customer's experience.

We're looking for the most exciting as well as the most impactful advocacy campaigns that have successfully combined great ingenuity, a memorable customer experience and actionable engagement, all resulting in some serious measurable results. If you've tapped into the power of a well-executed campaign to drive customer advocacy, this is an award for you.

Describe your customer advocacy or engagement campaign theme and goals.

How did you and/or your team bring the campaign to life? Explain the tools, creative process, teams and tactics.

What outcomes did you and/or your team achieve running this campaign? Provide specific metrics, if possible.

What actions, if any, did you and/or your team take after the campaign to maximize the value delivered to the business or participants?

Customer Success Advocacy Accelerator

Driving customer value—from customer success to advocacy.

This customer success professional understands the power of nurturing customer loyalty that leads beyond renewal to powerful customer advocacy.

They leverage day-to-day best practices to identify, nurture and activate customers or work hand-in-hand with their customer marketing and advocacy colleagues.

In your own words, why is it important for Customer Success professionals to play an active role in securing customer advocacy?

How do you think beyond the typical CS remit to not only secure customer success and account retention but also build customers for life who are willing to advocate for your organization?

How do you collaborate with others in your organization to identify, nurture and activate customer advocates?

What customer advocacy outcomes have you been able to impact as a CS professional?

How do you bring awareness to other CS professionals and/or leadership around the importance of the customer success team's role in building customer advocacy?

Exceptional Advocacy Portfolio

A holistic advocacy strategy.

You've long-since discovered that there is no one-size-fits-all approach to building relevant customer nurture and engagement that leads to advocacy. By honing in deeper on the individuals who make up your customer base and focusing on relevance at scale, you've developed a holistic advocacy portfolio, housing multiple advocacy programs, aligned by a strong brand, overarching metrics, collaborative processes and team resourcing. Your advocacy portfolio exhibits the evolution of the customer advocacy practice and the teams that support it.

Describe the portfolio of customer programs you and/or your team run to support your advocacy goals.

Describe how you and/or your team have matured the internal, cross-functional collaboration model for customer advocacy in your organization.

What is it about your advocacy brand that your customers connect with?

How have you and/or your team gained executive and c-suite visibility and support in your organization?

What platform(s) or tool(s) do you and/or your team currently use to support the management and execution of your advocacy portfolio? (optional)

Lifecycle Advocacy

Tying advocacy activation to the customer journey.

This customer advocacy program encapsulates the idea that “advocacy is a practice, not a platform,” leaning into the fact that advocacy happens everywhere, not just the spaces we create for self-admitted customer advocates. Not everyone is a card-carrying advocate, but this organization understands that there are still opportune moments for nurturing and motivation throughout their brand experience.

They lead the way in practice evolution by integrating advocate engagement strategies into the tools and processes that support the customer journey. They look for new and innovative ways to leverage data to pinpoint key opportunities for high-impact moments, and they have a constant pulse on how customer engagement and advocacy are evolving, never settling for a one-size-fits-all approach, but instead seeking to ensure every customer advocacy touchpoint is anchored in relevance.

In your own words, what is lifecycle advocacy?

What innovative lifecycle advocacy strategies have you and/or your team implemented at your company?

What has been the biggest challenge you and/or your team have overcome implementing lifecycle advocacy?

What outcomes have you and/or your team achieved by implementing a lifecycle advocacy strategy?

What platform(s) or tool do you currently use to execute your lifecycle advocacy efforts?

The Advocacy Mindset

Think value first.

This professional embodies the advocacy mindset by developing and executing advocacy strategies that lead with customer value first.

They have an innate ability to nurture deep relationships with their customers, while at the same time understanding how to harness the power of relationship to lead to business growth. They have contributed to the advocacy community, and are more interested in growing the practice than ensuring a solo spotlight.

In your own words, what does embracing an Advocacy Mindset mean to you?

How have you exhibited an Advocacy Mindset through your work with customers?

What are you doing to instill an Advocacy Mindset inside your business?

What are the measurable outcomes you have experienced from leading with an Advocacy Mindset?

How have you participated in and contributed to the growth of the broader customer advocacy community and practice?

Advocate of the Year

Recognizing the advocate behind advocacy.

A chance to shine the spotlight where it truly belongs - on your customer.

This advocate partnered with your organization and advocacy team to drive value for both your organization and for themselves. They exhibit the ideal customer any vendor would be lucky to have. Whether they've played a high-profile role in telling their customer experience story or have quietly worked behind the scenes as an extension of your team, now is your chance to recognize them for their commitment to customer collaboration and support of your customer advocacy initiatives. This award is designed to pay it forward to those who make our profession possible and who make it so much damn fun to do.

Who is your advocate of the year? (Name, Title, Organization, Email, Name of Your Program They're a Member Of)

What makes this advocate special to you and your organization?
